What does “repent” also mean?

The Lord’s first message to the Disciples in the “Americas” was the same as to the Disciples in the Land of Israel, that of repentance. The word “repentance” in Hebrew literally means “to turn” or “return.” Although Judaism sees sin as a most serious matter, even the sinner is not without hope. One of the most important theological doctrines of both the Bible and the Talmud is that if a sinner repents his bad deeds, God will forgive him. Repentance consists of several stages --- firstly the sinner must reflect on his actions and realize that he has indeed done the wrong thing. He must then make up his mind never to do it again and confess his sin. This confession is not made to any other human being but is made by the sinner directly to God. On this basis the two confessions Ashamnu and Al-Het (confession prayers) were introduced into the prayers for the Day of Atonement which is a special occasion for repentance and forgiveness. However, even when a sinner has done all these things, his repentance is still not final until he has been exposed to the same temptation and withstood it. Of course he should not deliberately put himself on that spot again.” “Repentance in Hebrew is known as teshuvah, which literally means ‘return,’ and signifies a return to God. A person who repents his sins is known as a ba’al teshuvah (accomplished a return). Many rabbis of the Talmud believed that the real ba’al teshuvah is greater even than a person who has never sinned and they furthermore said that when a person repents out of love of God (and not just out of fear of divine punishment), all the sins he had committed are considered to be mitzvot (blessings). This is perhaps the most comforting doctrine that Judaism has given to the world.” (Encyclopedia Judaica Jr.)

Who may be that “unknown visitor?”

The special request of the Three Nephite Disciples to remain on the earth to serve mankind’s quest in returning to God is, of course, similar to the Lord's beloved Disciple, John, in Israel. The Jews have a tradition (aggadah) that has a somewhat similar idea of special "unknown" visitors. Some refer to them as "Zaddikim" or very righteous beings. "According to an aggadah in the Babylonian Talmud, in each generation there are exactly 36 righteous men – Lamed Vav Zaddikim – who received the Divine Presence and whose righteousness sustains the world. In the folklore of the Kabbalah and later that of Hasidism, the idea of these lamedvavniks, as they were commonly called, assumed great significance. They were believed to be anonymous saints who remained unnoticed by other men because of their humble nature and vocations. However, in times of great peril it was believed that the lamedvavnik dramatically appeared and used his hidden powers to defeat the enemies of Israel. Then, as mysteriously as he came, he returned to his usual obscurity." (Encyclopedia Judaica Jr.)

How can man and beast "be one?"

The miracle of being unharmed of wild beasts is a reminder of a spiritual presence and worthiness that can prevail with man and beasts. One miracle is reflected in the ancient scriptures as Daniel was among lions and yet remained unharmed. "My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me: forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me; and also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt." (Daniel 6:22) "The international peace of the Messianic era is described in a beautiful

What are "plusses" and "minuses" of costumes or uniform clothing?

The Hassidic sect of Judaism attempted to create a commonality as they formed their special society a few hundred years ago. They wore black clothing to identify their common connection. They may have decided to do so based on ancient Biblical Jewish tradition and, in some cases, being forced to identify themselves as Jews. "Today, most Hasidim live in the United States and Israel. Among the main dynasties are such diverse groups as the passage in (Isaiah 11:6--7): animals which are natural enemies will live together in harmony. 'And the wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox.'" (Encyclopedia Judaica Jr.)

How much concentration does it take to live the law of consecration?

Holding earthly things in common reflects a higher attitude and discipline that true disciples of the Lord can raise themselves to. The people who followed the Disciples of Jesus in Israel had that standard for a while. Jews have attempted to raise themselves to that level throughout the ages. "And all that believed were together and had all things common; And sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all [men], as every man had need."

(Acts 2:44-45) The modern Kibbutz system in Israel is a lesser derivation of the principle of holding things in common and working for the common good of the entire community. "There is no private wealth whatever. Once a new member is accepted after a year's trial period, he gives everything he owns (apart from personal possessions) to the kibbutz. In addition, he is expected to put in his honest day's work in whatever field the kibbutz planning committee finds most useful for the kibbutz as a whole." (Encyclopedia Judaica Jr.)

Habad-Lubavich movement, which describes itself as 'a mission to Jews by Jews;' the violently anti-Zionist Satmar Hasidim; the 'classical' Hasidim of Belz and the scholarly followers of the Gur dynasty." "But though these groups have their philosophical differences, they maintain a very similar way of life which has changed little since the 18th century. The men dress in traditional kapotes (long black coats; silk for the Sabbath and holidays) and wide-brimmed black hats, which may be replaced by the fur-trimmed shtreimel on special occasions." Imagine . . . wearing a tunic with purple stripes, as Jews once did in Persia; a long black gown as in medieval Spain; a yellow turban as in 16th-century Turkey; or a vest with 12 silver buttons as in 19th-century India. In many countries Jews have favored a distinctive style of dress, which has often helped them preserve their own identity in a foreign environment. Thus the Midrash gives three reasons by virtue of which our forefathers were redeemed from their slavery in Egypt. One of them is “that they did not change their style of dress.” “Our first fashion record is the Bible, which describes common, priestly, and royal dress. Monuments in Egypt and Mesopotamia clearly show the styles of that time, which indicated a man's wealth and status. A common garment consisted of a white cloth suspended from the waist to the knees.” (Encyclopedia Judaica Jr.)

How can modest clothing bring us closer to God?

Sometimes clothing or types of clothing are used to create an identity. The extremes of fashion often shout the departure from self-discipline and godliness. The return to beautiful and yet modest clothing, turning our concern to the other's well-being and turning to God in all ways is the Lord's call of repentance, which is “His Gospel.”
